The Old Manse is a spectacular Victorian detached house and coach house set in substantial private grounds at the entrance to Mansefield Heights, Portglenone. The property was built in 1896 and still retains many of its original features and certainly all its charm and character. The current owners have enjoyed a fantastic family life here over the last 25 years and are ready to let another family modernise and make it their own. A very rare opportunity!PROPERTY DESCRIPTIONThe Old Manse, coach house and grounds were built in 1896 for the minister of Third Presbyterian Church, Portglenone. A substantial Victorian property, it still retains all its charm and character permeating from its original features such as high ceilings, wooden sash windows, picture and dado rails and cornicing. The property does benefit from an oil fired central heating system but would benefit from some modernisation to bring it up to current expectations. It provides spacious and flexible living accommodation which should be enjoyed as a fantastic family home.ENTRANCE HALLStone steps up to imposing solid wood front door set in arched stonework and pitched roof.
