Gentle, easy going and practical, it'll see you through your test and beyond. The Yamaha YBR125's air-cooled four stroke is pretty nippy, with enough power to propel you around town or along easy A roads at a fairly decent pace. The Yamaha YBR125's top whack's around 70mph but cruising at 55mph is infinitely more comfortable. The Yamaha YBR125's very light and boasts surprisingly good handling: it's just forgiving and easy to practice your cornering on. The suspension's basic but effective while the Yamaha YBR125's brakes are good, especially at the front. Analogue clocks and a fuel gauge make up the Yamaha YBR125's useful dash; there's a centrestand, luggage rack and a grabrail for pillions. The seat on the Yamaha YBR125 is pretty comfy, even over distance. Cast alloy wheels look smart and enhance the clean lines of the machine. Very cheap to insure and fuel consumption's astonishing this really is a very affordable machine to run.
