From the saddle the Thunderbird ticks all the right boxes in a slick, beautifully produced way: low, laid back saddle (check); cool and chromy pull back bars complete with chunky grips and switchgear (check); tank-mounted chrome instrument console with neatly integrated tacho and multi-functional LCD display (check), ABS plus a massive range of aftermarket accessories. In a nutshell, any cruiser feature you can think of is present and correct, right down to the ignition key under the seat. It performs well, handles great, is beautifully built and has all the cruiser goodies you could wish for. The T-bird is equipped with a meaty frame, suspension and brakes with easy handling. Triumph 1600cc lump dominates the Thunderbird and is the world's biggest production parallel twin. Peak torque comes at just 2750rpm and it redlines at 6500rpm Close your eyes and you'd assume it's a Vee rather than a parallel, and although most of the vibes are cancelled out by twin balancer shafts in front and back of the block, there is still plenty of character left in the engine, Paint and chrome is good as is fit and finish and general quality of components.
