Osteopathy is an established, recognised system of diagnosis and treatment of injuries and conditions based around the structure and function of the body. Osteopaths look at how the parts of the body interact; the bones, joints, ligaments, discs, muscles, tendons and nerves. Osteopaths can help reduce the risk of further injuries due to a change in the body's working patterns to compensate for the original complaint with effective osteopathic treatments. Osteopathy is not just for curing injuries! By repairing the mechanics of the body, it's ability to function at a higher level is achieved, great for anyone who enjoys sport and wants to improve their.
