To commemorate Olympic Games in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Samsung has taken the wraps off a special edition of the Galaxy S7 Edge. These phones were gifted to athletes who competed at the games. The Galaxy S7 Edge Olympic Games Limited Edition more or less looks the same as the regular variant, except the speaker grill at the top is yellow, and so is the trim around the home button. The power button is red, the volume rocker buttons are green, and the outline around the camera and flash are blue — the four colours represent the Olympic rings, and the fifth colour, black, is reserved for the rest of the smartphone. Speaking of rings, the official Olympic Games logo rests on the back of the S7 Edge special edition — it's blue, and it also notes Samsung as a "Worldwide Partner" below it. In addition to showing off the Olympic colours and logo on the exterior, the special edition S7 Edge will also display the Olympic Rings "in the phone's user interface in the home and lock screens, as well as the message, dial, and contact screens, and notification bar." A Samsung spokesperson tells Digital Trends that since it's all a theme, it can easily be turned off and you can uninstall the Olympic apps if you want. You'll also find official Olympic apps pre-installed, as well as Rio 2016-themed wallpapers. Overall, after getting our hands on it we can say the Olympic Edition of the S7 Edge is drop-dead gorgeous. This phone has not been used and comes with all boxes (opened) and accessories as pictured. just email me for info , i can also
